

How To Get A Passport In Australia

How To Get A Passport In Australia: Your Complete Step-by-Step Guide

Planning an overseas trip or preparing for an unexpected journey abroad? One of the first things you will need is a valid travel document. Understanding how to get a passport in Australia is essential for any adult or child planning to leave the country. Whether you are applying for the first time or renewing an existing document, the process is straightforward once you know what is required. This guide covers everything from eligibility and fees to processing times and helpful tips to ensure your application goes smoothly.

An Australian passport is a valuable document that proves your identity and citizenship. The Australian Passport Office manages all applications, and there are specific steps you must follow to obtain one. By reading this article, you will gain a clear understanding of the entire process, helping you avoid common mistakes and unnecessary delays.

Who Is Eligible For An Australian Passport?

Before you begin your application, it is important to confirm that you are eligible. Only Australian citizens can apply for an Australian passport. If you are not sure about your citizenship status, you can check with the Department of Home Affairs. Generally, you are eligible if:

- You were born in Australia and hold Australian citizenship.
- You were born overseas to at least one Australian citizen parent.
- You have been granted Australian citizenship by conferral or descent.

Children, including infants and newborns, also need their own passport to travel overseas. Parents or guardians must apply on their behalf. It is worth noting that dual citizens are also entitled to an Australian passport, but they must use it to enter and leave Australia.

Types Of Australian Passports

There are several types of Australian passports, each designed for different travel needs. Knowing which one you need is an important part of how to get a passport in Australia:

- Standard Adult Passport: Issued to adults aged 18 and over, valid for up to 10 years.
- Child Passport: Issued to children under 18, valid for up to 5 years.

- Senior Passport: For Australians aged 75 and over, valid for up to 5 years.
- Diplomatic and Official Passports: Available to those travelling on government business.
- Emergency Passport: Issued in urgent situations, outside normal office hours or in emergency travel scenarios.

Most travellers will require a standard adult or child passport, so the remainder of this guide focuses on those categories.

Step 1: Gather Your Required Documents

The key to a successful application is having the correct documentation. The Australian Passport Office requires specific original documents to verify your identity and citizenship. You will need:

- Proof of Australian citizenship: Your full Australian birth certificate (not a commemorative certificate) or your Australian citizenship certificate.
- Proof of identity: A current driver licence, a Medicare card, a bank card, a credit card, or other government-issued identification. You will need at least three documents from the identity list.
- Recent passport photographs: Two identical colour photos that meet the official passport photo guidelines. Many Australia Post outlets can take these for you.
- Supporting witnesses: An eligible witness must sign your application and verify your identity. This person must be an Australian citizen who has known you for at least one year and works in a recognised profession such as a doctor, police officer, or teacher.

If you are applying for a child, you will need additional documents including the child's full birth certificate, proof of the child's citizenship, and documents for both parents or guardians. Both parents must consent to the child receiving a passport.

Step 2: Complete Your Application Form

You have two options for completing your application: online or by paper. The online method is generally faster and more convenient. To apply online, you need to create an account on the Australian Passport Office website. The system will guide you through each section, and you can save your progress and return later if needed.

If you prefer a paper application, you can download the form from the same website or collect one from an Australia Post outlet. Fill it out carefully using black pen and block letters. Any mistakes or missing sections can delay your application, so double-check everything before you submit.

For first-time adult applicants, you must lodge your application in person at a participating Australia Post outlet. You cannot submit a first-time application online without attending an interview. Renewals can often be completed by mail or online, depending on your circumstances.

Step 3: Pay The Passport Fee

There is a fee for every Australian passport application. The cost varies depending on the type of passport you are applying for and how quickly you need it. As of the most recent update, fees are as follows (these are subject to change, so always check the official website):

How To Get A Passport In Australia

- Standard adult passport (10 years): Approximately $325.
- Child passport (5 years): Approximately $165.
- Senior passport (5 years): Approximately $165.
- Emergency passport: Higher fee applies, plus additional service charges.

Additionally, there is a priority processing fee of around $225 if you need your passport in a hurry. This can reduce processing time to 2 business days, although you must pay this fee at the time of lodgement. You can pay using a credit card, debit card, or other accepted methods at the time of application.

Step 4: Lodge Your Application

Once your form is complete and your documents are ready, you need to lodge your application. For most first-time applicants, this means visiting an Australia Post outlet that offers passport services. You can find your nearest participating outlet using the Australia Post website. You will need to bring all original documents and two passport photos. An officer will check your documents, take your photo if needed, and process your payment.

If you are renewing a passport and your previous one was issued when you were an adult, you may be able to lodge your application by mail. You will still need to include original documents and photos, so it is essential to use registered post to keep everything secure.

Step 5: Wait For Processing

After you have lodged your application, the Australian Passport Office will review it and verify your documents. Standard processing times are generally:

- Basic applications: Up to 6 weeks.
- Priority applications: 2 business days (if you pay the priority fee).

Processing times can vary depending on the time of year. During peak travel season, such as the summer holidays, applications can take longer. It is wise to apply well in advance of any planned travel. You can track the status of your application online using your application reference number.

If the Passport Office needs additional information or has questions about your documents, they will contact you. Respond quickly to avoid further delays. Once your passport is approved, it will be printed and sent to your nominated address via registered post. You will need to sign for it upon delivery.

Passport Photos: What You Need To Know

One of the most common reasons for application rejection is incorrect passport photos. Australian passport photos have strict requirements. Your photo must:

- Be taken in colour against a plain white or light background.
- Show your full face with a neutral expression and both eyes open visible.

- Not include sunglasses, hats, or head coverings unless for religious or medical reasons.
- Be no older than six months.
- Be 35mm to 40mm wide and 45mm to 50mm high.

The easiest way to ensure your photos are correct is to have them taken at an Australia Post outlet that offers passport photo services. The staff are trained to meet official standards. If you take your own photos, use the official photo checker tool on the Australian Passport Office website to verify them before you submit.

Passport For Children And Minors

Applying for a child's passport involves additional steps. Both parents or legal guardians must provide consent. If one parent cannot attend the lodgement appointment, they can complete a Parental Consent form and have it witnessed. The child must also be present when the application is lodged if they are over two years old, but children under two are generally not required to attend.

Child passports are valid for five years, and they cannot be renewed online. You must apply for a new passport once the child's current one expires. Grandparents or other relatives who are not legal guardians cannot apply for a child's passport without proper documentation.

Renewing An Australian Passport

If you already hold an Australian adult passport that has expired or is about to expire, you may be able to renew it more easily. Renewal is available if:

- Your previous passport was issued when you were 18 years or older.
- Your previous passport was valid for at least two years.
- Your personal details have not changed (or you can provide documents to support a name change).
- Your passport is not damaged and has not been reported lost or stolen.

If you meet these conditions, you can apply online or by paper without needing to visit an Australia Post outlet in person. You will still need to provide recent photos and pay the fee. If you do not meet the renewal criteria, you must apply as a new applicant.

Lost Or Stolen Passports

If your Australian passport is lost or stolen, you must report it immediately. This protects you from identity fraud. You can report it online or by calling the Australian Passport Office. Once reported, the passport is cancelled and cannot be used again. You will then need to apply for a new passport, and you may need to complete a statutory declaration explaining the circumstances of the loss.

Replacing a lost or stolen passport incurs the same fees as a new application. If you are overseas and lose your passport, contact the nearest Australian embassy or consulate for assistance. They can issue an emergency travel document to help you return to Australia.

How To Get A Passport In Australia

Can I travel while my passport application is being processed?

No, you must wait until your new passport arrives before you can travel. You cannot use an old expired passport or a passport that is in the process of being replaced.

What if my name has changed?

If you have changed your name due to marriage, divorce, or deed poll, you will need to provide official documents such as a marriage certificate or change of name certificate. You cannot renew online if your name is different from your previous passport.

How long is an Australian passport valid?

Adult passports are valid for 10 years. Child and senior passports are valid for 5 years. Passports issued to people aged 75 and over are also valid for 5 years.

Can I use my Australian passport after it expires?

No, an expired passport is not valid for travel, even if your visa is still current. You must renew it before you travel.

What should I do if my passport gets damaged?

If your passport is damaged, you must apply for

Application

To ensure your experience with how to get a passport in Australia is as smooth as possible, keep these tips in mind:

- Apply early: Do not wait until the last minute. Ideally, apply at least 12 weeks before you plan to travel.
- Check your documents: Make sure all your identification documents are current and original. Photocopies are not accepted.
- Use the photo checker: If you take your own photos, use the official online tool to verify they meet requirements.
- Keep a copy: Make a copy of your completed application and all documents before you submit them.
- Track your application: Use the online portal to monitor progress, especially during busy periods.
- Sign your passport: Once you receive your passport, sign it on the designated line immediately. An unsigned passport is not valid for travel.

Frequently Asked Questions About Australian Passports